

CROWDS VISIT CO. INFIRMARY

Old Folks Moving Today
Into New Home Built
Near Roy

Hundreds of persons yesterday afternoon and last night were guests of the Weber county commissioners at the opening of the county infirmary near Roy and inspected the new home of the old folks of the county which has been completely remodeled and modernized at an approximate cost of $50,000. Throughout all hours of the day and until 11 o'clock last night visitors from four counties thronged the building and expressed surprise and delight over the well-lighted rooms, the large dining halls, well equipped kitchen, hospital and many other features.

Entertainment, dancing, music and refreshments were furnished the guests at all hours and members of the county commission and county officers were on hand to pilot the visitors about the big building and explain the up-to-date equipment. One of the outstanding features of the home is a fully equipped hospital, including an operating room. The installation of the hospital is believed by the commissioners, will effect a saving to the county of from $2,000 to $3,000 a year, in that sick patients may be taken care of there instead of being sent to other hospitals at heavy expense.

OUTSIDE PATIENTS.
With the new building enlarged so that approximately 150 inmates may be comfortably housed, the expense of operation can also be greatly reduced through the taking in of wards from Box Elder, Davis and Morgan counties, which have no infirmaries.

The Weber county commissioners have contracts with these counties to take care of their old folks, but the right is always reserved to reject outside patients in the event that the building should become overcrowded. Weber county wards will have the preference of entrance at all times.

OFFICIALS MAKE VISIT.
Officials and commissioners of the three surrounding counties were visitors yesterday and thoroughly inspected the building. They expressed favorable comments over the new home, declaring it to be equal in all ways to any in the state.

In planning and completing the new home, a great amount of credit is due to members of the county commission and other county officers, who took a keen interest in providing suitable housing facilities for the old folks. It was built without the floating of bonds, the expense being paid out of current moneys during the last year. There was surprise expressed yesterday when it was determined by the visitors that the $50,000 which made the building a reality, was paid from the current expenses in the face of the fact that the commissioners and county officers reduced the annual tax levy one-half mill.

George Burdick, contractor, who completed the new building, was showered with congratulations yesterday by the county officers and the hundreds of visitors, both for the thoroughness in which each detail of the building had been finished and for the completion of the work in record time. The entire building was completed since September 1, 1921.

Mr. Burdick explained that his success was largely due to the full cooperation given him at all times by the county commissioners and the county officers.

M. Charles Woods, architect, who drew the plans for the new infirmary, was also present at the opening yesterday.

54 ROOMS AND WARDS.
The building contains a total of 54 rooms and wards, of which 24 individual rooms, well-lighted with from two to four windows, and completely furnished with new furnishings. The wards will accommodate approximately 12 persons. Seven bath rooms, complete with the most modern conveniences, are distributed throughout the building. The halls are 15 feet in length.

Two large dining rooms will provide ample space so that men and women inmates may dine separately. A kitchen adjoins both dining rooms. A recreation or assembly room has been installed on the second floor, which can accommodate more than 100 persons. The front of the main portion of the building on the second floor contains a large sun porch with steam fixtures so that it may be used throughout the year.

An artesian well within the immediate vicinity of the building furnishes ice cold water to the building and water is furnished from this source for heating purposes. A septic tank will insure proper sanitation of the new home.

The up-to-date steam heating plant sends warmth to every portion of the building, into each room and hall, and operates almost entirely mechanically so that but little labor is required in its operation.

Grounds surrounding the building will be laid out in lawn and flowers. Hugs trees insure ample shade during the hot summer months.

The first of the county wards will be moved to their new home late this afternoon, and more will follow during the next few days. It is planned to have the inmates completely settled during the early part of next week.

Poses as a Corpse
to Capture Bogus
Prohibition Agent

PITTSBURG, Jan. 18.—Posing as a corpse in an undertaking shop, Prohibition Agent A. E. Kemmerling reported that he had succeeded in capturing an alleged bogus prohibition agent who has been wanted by authorities for some time.

Kemmerling declared arrangements were made for him to pose as a corpse when it was understood that the alleged bogus agent was to come to the undertaking shop to receive "hush" money from a hotel proprietor. All funeral trappings, even to lighted candles were arranged, Kemmerling said, with the result that he overheard the transactions between the men involved and obtained marked bills from his prisoner.

THEATRES

Last Chance Today to See
"The Conquering Power"
at Alhambra

Reynolds, through his masterful production of Metro of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," established himself supreme among directors. A tremendous spectacle, envisaging the war as reflected through two continents, it overwhelmed with a superb sense of power.

In "The Conquering Power," his newest production, seen again last night at the Alhambra theatre, he works in an entirely different genre. Here we have an intensely intimate study of family life, a universal story of love and greed against the background of a French provincial town. The story has been adapted by June Mathis from Balzac's novel, "Eugenie Grandet," with swift-moving, masterful continuity. Mr. Ingram has illustrated it with pictures that have the total quality of great works of art; the soft lighting of the photography and the perfectly composed groupings give an exquisite sense of reality. It is a long stride from "The Four Horsemen," but as an artistic achievement, no less noteworthy.

Although there are no official stars, three of the actors stand out with stellar glow. Alice Terry, delicately beautiful and charming, gives a deeply moving performance as Eugenie; Rudolph Valentino, handsome and debonair, plays the lover, Charles, with a wealth of warm Latin temperament and magnetism; and Ralph Lewis, remembered as the Stoneman of "The Birth of a Nation," is thrillingly convincing as Eugenie's miserly father. Others in the distinguished cast are Edward Connelly, Edna Dumas, George Atkinson, Willard Lee, Mary Hearn, Bridgetta Clark, Mark Fenton, Eugene Pouyet and Ward Wing. The photography is by John F. Selts and the art interiors by Ralph Burton and Amos Myers.

The picture will have its final screenings this evening.

Mr. Meighan rode down Fifth avenue in a limousine from the theatre with a cameraman on an automobile directly in front ground the crank. Then he was held up by traffic, as part of the picture, and made a slight scene to show the annoyance of the character he was portraying. In a minute a crowd of nearly a thousand people gathered around, and traffic was really blocked, despite the efforts of the electric "Stop-and-Go" signals.

Mr. and Mrs. Meighan spent two days in Cleveland where Mr. Meighan made a personal appearance at the Loew State theatre. Marcus Loew paid the Paramount star a large sum of money to make this personal appearance, and Mr. Meighan promptly turned it over to a worthy Cleveland charity.

After leaving Cleveland, Mr. and Mrs. Meighan went to George Ade's country place at Brook Farm, Indiana, where they were guests of the famous author for two days. Mr. Meighan and Mrs. Ade have been close friends for years, the Paramount star having played leading roles in two of Ade's plays, "The College Widow" and "Father and the Son."
